Helen Moizer

Striking out, when is it appropriate? When is it draconian?

A handful of recent Employment Appeal Tribunal decisions serve as a helpful reminder as to when claims may be struck out. Helen will consider and give guidance on when strike out applications are appropriate and other strategies that can be used.

Ian Wheaton

Sexual harassment outside the workplace

The recent case of AB v Grafters where an employee offered a colleague a lift to the office in his car and sexually assaulted her was held to be in the course of his employment making the employer liable. Ian will provide an in-depth look at this case and the key considerations.

John Franklin

The Employment Rights Bill and beyond

John will provide a round-up of the The Employment Rights Bill. This includes the implications of the 'need to know' rights and a reminder of any other rights to be aware of.

Barnaby Large

ACAS Early Conciliation Certificates - Much Ado About Nothing?

ACAS Early Conciliation Certificates are essential for employees in the UK who wish to resolve workplace disputes before escalating to an Employment Tribunal. The government introduced changes in 2025 to the early conciliation process to manage rising demand and case complexity. Barney will discuss how these are shaping up and what real effect they have had.
