Amelia King

Family Law Update: Qualified Legal Representatives (QLRs), where are we now?

On 9th February 2024, the President of the Family Division, Sir Andrew McFarlane handed down a judgment that considers the approach that should be taken when a Qualified Legal Representative (QLR) has been directed to be appointed for a party, but no QLR can be found. Amelia King will provide an overview of the impact on family law cases looking at: What is a QLR? Why is a QLR necessary? What to do if no QLR is available? Amelia will also provide a simple but important reminder as to prohibited steps orders including who they can be made against and the terms.

Francis Payne

Parental responsibility: an update on the recent case law

Francis will discuss an overview of parental responsibility, the law, the unilateral exercise of PR and recent cases.

Barnaby Large

Public Funding for Private Law Children: an Adjudicator's Perspective

Barnaby will discuss his role as an adjudicator in appeals against Legal Aid funding decisions under the merits criteria and some of the dos and don'ts when making funding applications or appealing a funding decision.

Helen Moizer

Dealing with vulnerable clients in a private children /domestic abuse case

The majority of Family Law practitioners will be no stranger to clients with vulnerabilities or additional needs. By virtue of the fact of their vulnerabilities, clients with these difficulties are sadly more likely to end up in Family proceedings. Helen will discuss what to look out for when representing such clients and a few tips on how to look after yourself in the process.
