Rachel Chapman

Transparency orders

First introduced in 2023 and continuing to expand in 2025, Transparency Reporting allows accredited journalists and legal bloggers to attend and report on family court proceedings—something that was historically prohibited or heavily restricted. Rachel will discuss open justice v. privacy, The Transparency Reporting Pilot & beyond (including media, legal bloggers & researchers, reporting restriction & Transparency Orders)

Sara Chalk

Risk assessments and consideration of risk management taking into account the Welfare Checklist

Risk assessments and consideration of risk management are crucial in various contexts, including public law proceedings and child welfare. Sara takes an in-depth look at the consideration of risk management taking into account the Welfare Checklist.

Rebecca Caws

Public Law Cases update

Rebecca will explore the recent developments in case law and practice. Exploring key issues and changes, bringing you fully up to date.

Richard Carroll

Parents with Disabilities in Care Proceedings

The involvement of parents with disabilities in care proceedings is a significant concern, with studies indicating that a substantial percentage of care proceedings involve parents with learning disabilities or difficulties. Richard will discuss the issues and highlight the need for effective support and the implementation of good practice guidance to ensure that parents receive the necessary assistance.
